-Senator Sherman's views upon the national finances are published in the New York Herald. The questions connected with reconstruction having been settled by the late election, Mr. Sherman is of the opinion that Congress should now devote its attention toward restoring a specie currency to the country. To do this, he thinks, "we must satisfy the pecple that in no event will there be an increase in the currency. This will be the first step in the appreciation of the paper, and will accomplish all that an increase in the currency could do, because it will increase its representative value. Next we must adopt every other means of giving to the outstanding currency a higher value. Thus, if the gold receipts of the government are in excess of the gold interest it has to pay, there must be no accumulations and treasury sales; but instead of this the are suffering from his resentment, we have government must receive a portion of the customs in currency. Mr. Sherman does not favor the project of using surplus greenbacks for the payment of Government bonds. If carried out, he is of the opinion that it would be regarded Mr. Pendleton's theories as "repudiation in its worst form;" is a strong friend of national banks, and believes in our present system of taxation. He calls the Radical funding bill "a bridge to get over the election," and says: "The attempt to reduce interest to four per cent. in this country will fail. A funding bill must have more in it than a new privilege to the bondholder. We want a comprehensive meas. ure, providing for, first, funding the greenbacks; second, the reduction of the debt; third, the redemption of the five-twenty bonds when the five years are out, by sale of bonds bearing a lower rate of interest." The account concludes with an expression of Senator Sherman's hearty indorsement of universal suffrage. and the hope that Congress would embody this doctrine in a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the States.

Pollard and History.

So many matters of graver importance have recently occupied our attention, that perhaps few of our readers remember the protest we urged against the Mercury's commendation of Mr. Pollard and his forthcoming Life of Jefferson Davis. The substance of what we had to say was this: 1. We could not agree with our contemporary that Mr. Pollard had laid the Southern people under any obligation by his historical works, which were often incorrect, and were unsupported by any weight of personal character. 2. We deprecated any attack from the South upon Mr. Davis, especially while he is under prosecution for our sake, as unseasonable, ungrateful and criminal. To this article, all the assertions of which are notoriously and in every particular correct, Mr. Pollard publishes a characteristic how could he? To our criticisms he furiously objects-of course. Our reference to facts in his career, which unfit him for the dignified office of Southern historiographer, and which are known to the uttermost limit of newspaper circulation, are "anonymous "miles away:"-would Mr. Pollard have drawn upon his vocabulary quite so freely, if our article, as well as his card, had been please tell us what single statement or imwe said is indisputably true, had not the time come when that truth should be spo-"and lay under obligations," and in behalf of Mr. Davis whom, in our name, he again undertook to assail?

We have no cause for personal aversion to Mr. Pollard; we only protest against ern leader, he aggravates his fall and embitters his exile. Instead of vindicating Southern fame, he flouts at their "chivalry," as in his latest "card" in Richmond. He has fortunes of a free lance, and no longer pretend to be fighting under their banners. A ruse de guerre may be practiced a little too often; and this Mr. Pollard may find when his new Trojan horse is finished. Nebody expects our author to restrain tongue or pen as long as life lasts; but why something may be accomplished. But the should be disincline to represent himself,

"Only this and nothing more?"

There must be dissatisfaction and loudvoiced protest when he says: "I have maintained the reputation of the Southern peo-"ple and the virtue of their cause; but have "only been able to do it consistently with "the unworthiness of Mr. Davis, and on the "hypothesis that he was weak and derelict." But when he says: "Now if I am a rowdy, "is of no matter; or rather, it is an admirable "phenomenon, considering its extraordina-"ry gifts!"-whatever we may think of the logic, there is no one who can help admiring the sublime self-consciousness. And when he closes his flattering card with the modest request that we shall publish it over again, and with the reminder that the publie will know, despite our silence, that we are suffering from his resentment, we have no words to express our pleasure. Here it subsequent speculative lie will know, despite our silence, that we

He "plainly and sternly" asserts either that the Southern people have incurred "a dire disgrace-a shame-an in-"famy unparalleled in modern annals," or as a violation of the public faith and "it is that Jefferson Davis was "little brained as best not to lie under suspicion." He regards "a man and despicable as a ruler." He advertises that he will publish such scandals about this noble, afflicted gentleman, once the chieftain of us all, and now suffering for us all, as flush the cheek with indignant shame, even in their bare outline. One can scarcely believe that Mr. Pollard himself can associate that honored name with "vengeful plots," with "underhanded cor-"respondence," with "incendiarism," with "the influence of a woman in Mississippi ?" In such a fashion does Pollard do up history. To him it is all a melodrama, to be dashed off coarsely and quickly by the auand thunder, of fire and flowers and blood. philosophy of history; no solace for a debetrayed; no explanation of the failure of A history of such sort literature repudiates. And in the present case, higher than blood in his veins, executes such a work as impoverished, persecuted, exiled leader! Mr. Pollard need not fear that his prom-

He has greater reason to fear that the people whom he saves from "un-"paralleled infamy," will prove so ungrateguage of his own brother, in publishing the card, shows what the most kindly criticism of the production will be. "We do not "wish," he says, "to be understood by its "publication as endorsing or approving his views or animadversions upon Mr. Davis. #### Schiedam Schnapps.

OFFICE OF UDOLPHO WOLFE, Sole Importer of the Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps No. 22 Beaver-street. New York, November 3, 1868. To the People of the Southern States: WHEN THE PURE MEDICINAL RESTORATIVE, now so widely known as WOLFE'S SCHIEDAM SCHNAPPS, was in'roduced into the world under the endorsement of four thousand leading members of the medical protession some twenty years ago, its proprietor was well aware that it could not wholly escape the penalty attached to all new and useful preparations. He, therefore, endeavored to invest it with strongest possible safeguard against counter feiters, and to render all attempts to pirate it difficult and dangerous. It was submitted to distinguished chemists for analysis, and pronounced by them the purest spirit ever manufactured. Its purity and properties having been thus ascertained, samples of the article were forwarded to ten thousand physicians, including all the leading practitioners in the United States, for purposes of experiment. A circular, requesting a trial of the preparation and a report of the result, accompanied each specimen. Four thousand of the most eminent medical men in thor, to be splashed off by the scene painter | the Union promptly responded. Their opinions of with vermillion and gamboge, to come be-fore the public a mighty sensation of tinsel the profession, as no reliance could be placed on the ordinary liquors of commerce, all of which were To him there is no happy mean; no deep more or less adulterated, and therefore unfit for medical purposes. There are some, qualified to speak, his trade mark, in the United States District Court year.

It might be supposed by persons una quainted with the during character of the pirates who prey upon the reputation of honorable merchants by vending deleterious trash under their name, that the protections so carefully thrown around these Schnapps ful as to refuse to buy his book. The lan- would have precluded the introductions and sale o counterfeits. They seem, however, only to have stimula'ed the rapacity of impostors. The trade mark of the proprietor has been stolen; the indorsement which his Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps alone received from the medical profession has been claimed by mendacious humbugs; his labels and bottles have been imitated, his advertisements para phrased, his circulars copied, and worse than all, dishonorable retailers, after disposing of the genuine "tunity, we may say here, in all frankness contents of his bottles, have filed them up with common gin, the most deleterious of all liquors, and thus made his name and brand a cover for poison. The public, the medical profession and the sick for whom the Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps is pre-"orable a man as ever lived. We have scribed as a remedy, are equally interested with the proprietor in the detection and suppression of these netarious practices. The genuine article, manufac tured at the establishment of the undersigned in when we are in truth one of his greatest | Schiedam, Holland, is distilled from a barley of the "admirers." By a process unknown in the preparation o any other liquor, it is freed from every acrimonious and corrosive element.

Complaints have been received from the leading physicians and families in the Southern States of the sale of cheap imitations of the Schiedam Aromatic Schnopps in those markets; and travellers, who are in the habit of using it as an antidote to the baneful influence of unwholesome river water, tes-tify that cheap gin, put up in Schiedam bottles, is frequently palmed off upon the unwary. The agents of the undersigned have been requested to institute inquiries on the subject, and to forward to him the names of such parties as they may ascer tion. In conclusion, the undersigned would say that distinguished men of science in America, proofs un answerable of the purity and medicinal excellence of the Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps; that he designed should protect the public and himself to be the only liquor in the world t challenged investigation, analysis, comparison and experiment in all its forms; and from every order the preparation which bears his name, seal and trade mark, has come off triumphant. 1 Dear Sir—I have made a chemical examination of a sample of your Schedam Schnapps, with the intent of determining if any foreign or injurious substance had been added to the simple distilled spirits. The examination has resulted in the conclusion that the sample contained no personous or harmful admixture. I have teen mable to discover any trace of the deleterious substances wich are employed in the adulteration of liquors. I would not hesitate to use myself or to recommend to others, for medicinal purposes, the Schiedam Schnapps as an excellent and unobjectionable variety of gin.
